Workshop Description:

Research in Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD) continues to evolve at an ever-accelerating pace. Keeping up with the new dimensions in how we assess, treat, and better understand the complexities of ASD can be both exciting and overwhelming. This workshop will present some of the recent avenues of exploration and findings in the fields of biology, technology, medicine, and education that are intriguing and which have implications for both current and future practice!

This workshop is fast paced and is designed to keep participants engaged and feeling like they are on the cutting edge of new dimensions in the science of understanding autism.

Outcomes: Participants will be able to:
• Review breaking research in the wider fields of autism.
• Explore how this may affect assessment and educational practice.

Target Audience:
General and special education teachers, school psychologists, families, administrators, nurses, adapted PE specialists and paraeducators
