

LSH WINTER SYMPOSIUM

Co-Sponsored by: San Joaquin SELPA, Stockton Unified SELPA, Lodi SELPA, and the University of the Pacific

The Autism Breakthrough: Treating Young Children with ASD from the Inside Out

This presentation will go beyond the basics of targeting language in children with autism. The first half of the seminar will dive into assessment and treatment of 3 foundational skills needed for successful and purposeful communication: regulation, engagement, and intrinsic motivation to communicate. The second half of the seminar will address how to assess and target higher level skills, including flexibility, pretend play, and social skills. Therapists will walk away from this presentation with hands-on tools, effective strategies, and reproducible handouts that can be used immediately in sessions to assess and treat children across the autism spectrum.

Speaker: Jessie Ginsburg, M.S., CCC-SLP

Jessie Ginsburg, M.S., CCC-SLP is a speech-language pathologist, autism expert, and owner of Pediatric Therapy Playhouse, a multidisciplinary clinic in Los Angeles. She is an autism blogger with an international following, and the creator of ASD from the Inside Out, an online course that teaches speech-language pathologists innovative ways to assess and treat young children on the autism spectrum. She presents at the state and national levels, contributes to the ASHA Leader, and is the Director-Elect for District 6 of the California Speech Language Hearing Association.

Learner Objectives:

- Describe the Language Staircase and the steps to developing purposeful, meaningful communication
- Explain why regulation, engagement and intrinsic motivation are the foundational skills needed to develop novel, flexible language
- Discuss effective strategies for improving regulation, engagement, intrinsic motivation, language, flexibility, play skills, and social interaction
- Create action plans for assessing and treating children on the spectrum from the inside out
